

International Social Work Practice: Advocating for Social Responsibility of Canadian Mining Corporations in Developing Countries

This presentation will focus on negative impacts Canadian mining corporations have on families in Mexico and what social mobilization activities the community has carried out to halt the mining company from continuing to poison their lands.

Here in Canada, growing awareness is promoting social responsibility thus creating pressure for government legislation regulating the practices of Canadian owned mining companies in developing countries.

Canadian Social Worker Linda Snyder will present case examples that connect Canadians with families in a global community to advocate for social justice for everyone around the world.

The presentation will be held at TRU (AE 100) on June 25th starting at 10:00 am – 11:30 am.
